ADDENDUM I:
The Literary and Historical Society of Quebec's 2008 Fall book auction

Dear friends, members, and booksellers,

We would like to inform you that the final deadline for the fall book auction has been postponed.

It is still possible to view the books on our premises until September 15th, but please be aware that contents of the final boxes may change slightly.

Please note that new information, including an updated bid form and auction list, will be posted on our website in late September at www.morrin.org/auction.pdf. All books removed from the auction will be clearly indicated on the new list.

In order to be considered, bids must be placed on the new form that will be posted in late September. If you have already sent a bid on an older form, please note that this bid will not be considered.

Do not hesitate to communicate with us if you need more information. We regret any inconvenience caused by this delay.

Sincerely,

France Cliche
Executive Director

Facts about the Fall book auction

• TIMELINE •

2003

Beginning of discussion on long-term library orientations at Council.

Winter 2004

Canadiana Development Committee, composed of board members, staff, and library users, receives mandate to evaluate Canadiana collections

Winter 2005

Committee presents recommendations to Council, outlining long-term conservation priorities for special collections.

Spring 2005

Public consultation of members held on May 14 entitled "To Weed or not to Weed." It is moderated by expert librarian Gerard Morin.

Our library seeks to achieve a balance between meeting the needs of today's users while preserving and showcasing its own heritage. In order to have a coherent well-rounded collection, weeding is something that happens in all libraries. We wish to reassure members that the upcoming auction of old books is the result of a well-thought out process that goes back to 2003, and that the library collections will emerge stronger as a result.

- The Literary and Historical Society of Quebec is committed to the preservation of heritage. We have raised 3.7 million dollars towards the restoration of our building, which will be completed in the following year;
- Approximately 25% of our collection consists of older non-circulating books that meet specialized interests and showcase the library's evolution, providing visitors with a rich and tangible contact with our past;
- Weeding of older books was not done because we needed space, but to remove duplicate copies, incomplete sets, or books in poor condition that were unfit to circulate. Older books that did not fall under these three criteria were not removed;
- 60% of the classics in the book auction were removed because duplicate copies in better condition existed in our circulating collection. In other words, we still have copies of the most important works by Hardy, Swift, Scott, Byron, Longfellow, Dickens and Voltaire on our shelves;
- Proceeds from the auction will be reinvested in the collection, with the purchase of classics for which we have no replacement copies as a top priority;
- Since the condition of many auctioned books is poor, the cost of restoring them is generally higher than the cost of buying a replacement copies of the same historic edition on

Spring 2005

Move of collection to temporary location and beginning of assessment project.

Spring 2006

Assessment report, including weeding criteria, approved by Council.

Library of the National Assembly invited for first pick of weeded material.

Spring book fair held.

Summer 2006

Library reopens in Morrin Centre.

Detailed article in summer edition of the Society Pages informing members of library assessment results and weeding criteria.

Fall 2008

Silent auction of books deaccessioned in 2006 held at the Morrin Centre.

the used book market. Furthermore, such editions can be easily found through online vendors like www.abebooks.com;

- None of the books in the auction are valued at more than $250. The least valuable of these are old classics of literature like Dickens and Hardy, which were mass produced at the time, generally not first editions, and can be easily replaced;
- We have been in touch with regional libraries with an interest in older material throughout this process. In 2005, the LHSQ invited the library of the National Assembly to look through our books weeded for the fair and upcoming auction and to select what they wanted at no cost. They left with one book;
- Since 2005, we have been working to raise the profile of our fiction collection and have acquired a complete collection of Booker Prize, Governor General, and Quebec Writers' Federation award winners. Numerous older classics were also purchased to replace worn or missing copies. This is an ongoing process that proceeds from the auction will allow us to continue;
- A well-rounded collection includes both classics and popular fiction. Some of our members prefer Shakespeare and others prefer Danielle Steele—we are committed to serving them all;
- Historians interested in researching the evolution of our collection study past catalogues, membership lists and circulation information preserved in the LHSQ archives—not the current library shelves;
- Since the LHSQ is a lending library, our auctioned books are not generally annotated as those in a personal collection would be. The historical value of any existing annotation is undermined by the fact that tracing their source would be nearly impossible;
- Book suggestions from the community are welcomed and generally purchased. If you feel any book is missing from our shelves, please provide your suggestions to library manager Simon Auclair at lhsqlibrary@morrin.org.

Press release

Issued by the Literary and Historical Society of Quebec

September 9th, 2008

English media:

QCT

CBC

Etc.

The Literary and Historical Society of Quebec is delighted that its book auction has provoked such a lively debate among society members and booklovers in the community at large.

“Everyone clearly has their own passionate view of the role the Society should play in the community,” said Society President David Blair. “This is testimony to how people in our community identify with the Society.”

Responding to concerns raised in the media about the loss to the Society of important works, at a meeting last night, the Council decided to postpone the date of the silent auction so as to once again review the books selected for sale.

Council invites interested members and friends to participate in this process by consulting the auction factsheet and the list of books for sale on the Morrin Centre website (morrin.org/auction.pdf) and by sending detailed recommendations of books they would like to see retained to [lhsq@morrin.org] by September 18th.
