1. INTRODUCTION

1.1. Context

The Literary and Historical Society of Quebec (LHSQ), founded in 1824, has a mandate to foster English-language culture in the Quebec City region and to share its diverse heritage. Literature is a vital element in this heritage, and the LHSQ has taken on a project to celebrate Quebec City's English-language literary heritage. The first step of this project is to generate an accessible knowledge base, or bibliography. This tool will have several repercussions: book purchases for the LHSQ's library, written articles to promote these books, and the hosting of literary events in 2007 and 2008. This project is financed by the Department of Canadian Heritage as part of the Development of Official-Language Communities Program - Community Life component.

1.2. Definition of the problem

In recent years, the LHSQ has held events, written articles and purchased books with a local heritage link. However, without a fully developed knowledge base, our efforts fall short of their full potential. Solid foundations need to be built in order to improve the quality and coherence of our services. This annotated bibliography will be a lasting tool that will allow us to have a broader portrait and to celebrate a wider range of literature from the past.

1.3. Objectives

This study's principal objective is to provide a useful and accessible knowledge base that will serve to promote and celebrate Quebec City's English-language literary heritage. A better knowledge of this past will awaken new ways of seeing and understanding the city, promoting a deeper sense of identity.

1.4. Limitations

This bibliography does not have the pretense of being complete. Creating an exhaustive bibliography would take ages and the LHSQ could only devote a few months of part-time work to this task. Because of time limitations, certain types of literature have been excluded from this bibliography, including most types of non-fiction. This bibliography focuses primarily on works of fiction and certain types of creative literary non-fiction written from a first person perspective (travel accounts, autobiographies, journals about daily life). Since this bibliography will lead to new book purchases, this focus was chosen because it corresponds to traditional spheres of interest within the LHSQ's collections. Selection criteria are detailed in 1.6. An additional volume may eventually be published that covers other spheres of interest.

1.5. Methodology

Several sources were used for this study. Existing bibliographical works, literary anthologies, the bibliographies of several history volumes, and encyclopedic works such as the Oxford Companion to Canadian Literature, were consulted. Searches by keyword were performed in a variety of online sources such as library catalogues, literary databases, online encyclopedias, online book vendors, etc. Browsing in the relevant collection areas of the Literary and Historical Society of Quebec and Université Laval libraries allowed us to unearth a few lesser-known texts. Finally, local experts in different fields were consulted, who agreed to look over the content as volunteers.

1.6. Criteria

The works selected consist solely of published books and short stories taken from larger collections. This includes posthumous publications of diaries and other material that was originally unpublished. Short works from periodicals, unpublished work, and self-published work with a low circulation has not been taken into consideration.

All works selected were originally published in English. Translations from the French have not been included.

The bibliography is divided into two sections, with different criteria applying to each:

Works written by Quebec City authors

For the purposes of this bibliography, Quebec City authors are defined as writers who have lived in the immediate Quebec City region for at least 5 years. The following types of work are included in this section:

- Prose fiction (novels, short stories), drama and poetry;
- Non-fiction is limited to autobiographies, memoirs, or personal journals related to everyday life in the city. This does not include biographies (the life story of a person written by another) or military siege journals.

Works written about Quebec City

For the purposes of this bibliography, ten or more pages should be devoted to Quebec City in the work in question, except in cases of internationally-renowned authors (Kipling, Dickens), where a shorter detailed description will suffice. The following types of work are included in this section:

- Prose fiction (novels, short stories), drama and poetry;
- Non-fiction is limited to original travel writing from a first-person perspective. Travel writing does not include accounts of military sieges, of which there is a large number that are frequently listed in military history bibliographies. Descriptive histories written in the third-person, conventional tourist guidebooks, or biographies of individuals who have lived in Quebec City written by a third party, have not been included;

1.7. Acknowledgments

Many thanks to Louisa Blair, Donald Fyson, Lorraine O'Donnell, Frederic Smith, and Elspeth Tulloch, who looked over initial drafts, provided constructive comments, suggestions for additions, and other valuable help. Thanks also to the Department of Canadian Heritage for financing this project.
